Carvoeiro

Algarve

Carvoeiro is a charming and historic village located in the western Algarve region of Portugal. With roots dating back to the Arab-Medieval period, the village was once a small fishing community known as "Caboieiro".

Today, the village has grown and evolved, but still maintains its rich history and cultural heritage.

Picturesque

Nestled in the sea cliffs, the picturesque Carvoeiro village with a sandy and sheltered beach is a popular destination for tourists.

The village is also surrounded by natural beauty, including the impressive rock formations of Algar Seco and the winding paths that lead to beautiful overhangs and caves. Carvoeiro is an ideal holiday destination all year round, with a dry and warm climate, perfect for outdoor activities such as golfing, water sports, sailing, fishing, and simply relaxing. The village is also renowned for its delicious local cuisine, including fresh seafood, wines, desserts, and the famous medronho brandy.

Whether you're looking for traditional or contemporary dishes, Carvoeiro offers a wide variety of restaurants to suit every palate, from typical local eateries to Michelin-starred restaurants.
